ACTION FOR PROGRESS, AN OFFICE OF ECONOMIC OPPORTUNITY ANTIPOVERTY PROGRAM, CONDUCTED A DEMOGRAPHIC SURVEY OF A 6-BLOCK SLUM AREA IN NEW YORK CITY'S LOWER EAST SIDE. DATA WERE GATHERED ON HOUSING, INCOME, EMPLOYMENT, SCHOOLING, HEALTH, RECREATION, CONSUMER PRACTICES, AND COMMUNITY AFFAIRS. THE AIMS OF THE SURVEY WERE TO DELINEATE THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE SLUM AREA. INTERVIEWERS WHO CONDUCTED THE SURVEY REFERRED THE PROBLEMS REQUIRING ACTION TO APPROPRIATE SPECIALISTS. A SERIES OF TABLES AND BRIEF DESCRIPTIONS PRESENTS DATA ON FAMILY STATUS, ETHNICITY, SOURCE OF INCOME, HOUSING AND RENTALS, EMPLOYMENT, SCHOOL COMPLETION, HOUSEHOLD SIZE, AND EXPRESSION OF INTEREST IN NEW HOUSING IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD. A SAMPLE QUESTIONNAIRE IN BOTH ENGLISH AND SPANISH IS INCLUDED IN THE DOCUMENT. (NH)

DEMOGRAPHY OF THE FORSYTH STRIP

J. J. Fishman

The Forsyth Strip is a six-block, self-contained area, bounded by four arterial streets; i.e., East Houston, Allen, Delancey, and Forsyth Streets. It lies within part of two Census Tracts, 36 on the North, and 18 on the South. (See map attached as Appendix A.) The Forsyth Strip is an old slum in New York's slum-ridden Lower East Side. All residence buildings were constructed prior to 1900, most of them prior to 1880. At the time of the 1960 Census, 59% of the buildings in the two Census Tracts were in deteriorating and dilapidated condition; in the Forsyth Strip in 1967 two buildings have been renovated and are in good condition, two are being repaired and managed by the City of New York because of multiple, severe violations of the building code, and several have been burned out and are uninhabitable. A total of 78 residence buildings are habitable.

There are three city-owned buildings in the Forsyth Strip: Francis Parkman High School (a special school with a small enrollment of emotionally disturbed boys) and Manpower Development Training Program (vocational) School operated by the Board of Education, and the only remaining public baths in the city operated by the Department of Public Works. Public services in the Strip are University Settlement, Nativity Mission Center, six religious and ethnic organizations, and one movie house. There is an overabundance of retail shops and small manufacturers, and, uniquely, seventeen antique and art shops, most of them along Allen Street. (Details of non-residential buildings and commercial establishments in the area are shown in Appendix B.)

UD 004 979

In July of 1965 the Office of Economic Opportunity funded a multi-purpose anti-poverty program, ACTION FOR PROGRESS, which is housed in three stores and in a room in University Settlement. In the summer and fall of 1966 ACTION FOR PROGRESS undertook an exploration of some of the specific characteristics of the population and their needs. The survey included information on housing, income, employment, schooling, health, recreation, consumer practices, and community affairs.

For the Survey, it was determined that an adequate sampling of the population would include a minimum of three apartments per occupied building. With the exception of one building which is kept locked and whose residents each refused to answer any questions, the tenements were all visited and interviews conducted. Some of the respondents declined to give certain information or did not know the answers to certain questions; these are indicated as "no response."

The ACTION FOR PROGRESS Survey served two purposes: one was to identify problems and establish methods for their solution; the other was to obtain a picture of the slum area. As interview records were received, indications for action in the various areas were sent to specialists; e.g., housing received all notes of housing problems, all health matters were referred to the health section, etc. As a result of the indications of need for dental care, for example, the health section was able to get a community group to ask for expanded dental care from two of the out-patient health care units used by area residents, and, additionally, one neighborhood dentist volunteered two half-days of dental services for residents referred from the health section. From the information obtained in the consumer practices section, a neighborhood buying club was organized.

The results of the survey are shown in the following sections:

I. Family Data

The largest proportion of the population are Hispanic, primarily Puerto Rican. Elderly Jewish and Italian persons comprise a large part of the white residents; many of the others are students (c.f., Section V, Family Size.)

* Includes one household of a Negro wife and Chinese husband.

The heads of 77 households (29%) of the 270 surveyed were women. Of these, 60 (78%) were unemployed; of the 16 employed, twelve had no children under six, while four did. The large proportion of unemployed female heads of household includes some elderly women living on Social Security benefits, and some with employed children; most of them receive some or total assistance from the Department of Welfare. (See Table 2, below.)

The majority of the households have one or more employed persons and while most incomes are minimal, wages are usually the sole income source. Income other than from employment is indicated in Table 3. It should be noted that the category "Department of Welfare Supplement," overlaps other income sources: wages, pensions, and/or social security benefits.

From whatever source, the annual household income is generally low. It is not as low, however, as the impression of the community would indicate, since the median lies between $2,500 and $4,000. With the size of the household ranging from one to thirteen, with a full 18% of one-person households, (See Table 4), the income range appears to be skewed upward. Table 4 indicates the ranges of income.

II. Housing

In the 1960 Census report, 59% of the housing in the two overlapping census tracts was rated as deteriorating and dilapidated. In the spring of 1967, it is estimated that 96% of the housing in the Forsyth Strip is deteriorating. Since all of the buildings were constructed prior to 1900, it is not surprising that 29 apartments still have toilets in the hall and six have neither a tub nor shower. (One building containing three of these "apartments" is still listed as a hotel and as such exempt from the bathing facility requirement.) Most of the apartments have a bathtub, a few only a shower, and some both tub and shower. But half of the apartments with bathing equipment have it in the kitchen.

The largest proportion of apartments (36%) consist of four rooms, but typically these are small, not separated by complete walls and a door, strung out in a row, with the center rooms frequently without windows. Closets are few and very small. A typical apartment may look like this:

Rentals in the area are low, ranging from $11 a month to $80, although nine apartments in the renovated buildings rent for over $100 monthly. Almost half of the rentals come within the $36 to $60 range. While there may be as many as 13, there is a mean of 4.5 people per apartment.

Despite the general impression that families in the area are very mobile, less than a third (31%) had lived in their apartment for under a year, while a full third (33%) have lived in their apartments over five years. (See Table 5, below, and Appendix C.)

Length of Time in Apartments

Time	Percent of Households

One to five years	.35

Over one-third of the households had moved to their present apartments from within the Forsyth Strip, with 40% having moved from Manhattan, many of them from very close to the target area. Two residents, one single elderly woman and one young married woman, have lived all of their lives in their present apartments.

III. Employment

Employment in the Forsyth Strip follows a predictable pattern. Of the 162 men and 53 women who were employed at the time of the survey, most of them were engaged in jobs requiring only moderate skill and training; e.g., factory (31% male, 53% female) and service (38% male, 13% female) occupations. The surprisingly small number of people engaged in sales occupations (5% male, 2% female) may reflect a generalized reluctance to seek such employment, or actual difficulty in obtaining such employment, because of language disability. While there is an understandable dearth of professional people in the area, the interviews did locate one case worker for the Welfare Department, and it is known, although interviews were not done, that there is one teacher and one graduate social worker living in the area.

Table 6, below, indicates the current employment by general areas; table 7 indicates previous employment areas. Appendix D shows employment by specific occupation.

IV. School Completion

School completion for persons over 25 indicates that a full ten percent had no formal schooling, only ten percent graduated from high school, but 57% had some elementary schooling, most of it, however, below the sixty grade. (See Table 8 below.) The largely Hispanic population has only 6% as high school graduates, with 60% with some elementary schooling. Negro and white high school graduates are 22% and 15% respectively, while each group approximates 30% of elementary schooling. The small number of Oriental residents who were surveyed show a disproportionate percentage (33%) who have had no formal schooling, but this percentage comprises only three elderly, retired men.

Most accounts of school completion within a population are not concerned with persons under the age of 25. Because of the large number of young people in the neighborhood who either are employed or in their own households, it was deemed advisable to record the school completion information for persons from 14 to 25. The lower limit of 14 was determined because of two married women of that age who are out of school. Table 9, below, summarizes the information for this group of persons.

V. Household Size

Out in the streets of the neighborhood it would appear that there must be at least half-dozen children for each apartment. In actuality, however, half of the families interviewed have no children. This includes some 18% of the total which are one-person households. About 43% of the households consist of three, four and five persons. Of the families with children, 23% have one to five pre-school children, some of whom were enrolled in Head Start or the Day Care Center which has a structured nursery-school program.

Table 10 indicates household size; table 11 the number of households with children under 16; and table 12 the number of households with pre-school children.

The one-person household in the Forsyth Strip is primarily of two types: the elderly Jewish, Italian, or Chinese person so long a resident of the Community (and frequently of the apartment) that it is possible for them to live on their social security or pension allowances because of the exceedingly modest rentals (see Table B for this information); the second major type of one-person household is the fairly young man or woman attending college at least part-time, or the creative person (artist or writer) who works only part-time, all of whom live in the neighborhood because of the low rents.

VI. Interest in New Apartments

In an attempt to ascertain housing needs, people were asked whether they would be interested in moving if new housing were built in the neighborhood, how many rooms they would need, and what they expected to pay for rent. Table 14 indicates the responses, and also makes it clear that at least one group of people are not aware of what rents for new housing might be, or stated that since the Welfare Department determined the amount to be budgeted for rent, they could not estimate it.

Many of the people who showed no interest in new housing in the area were actually very desirous of moving from their present apartments, but very emphatic that they did not want to live in the neighborhood. It appears difficult for some people to visualize the slum renovated to an extent that living in the area would be desirable.
